1. Primaries would have occurred even if Sanders had dropped out, because of downballot races.
2. Someone will always have a plurality at every point during the primary—at one point, Bernie had it.
3. People got sick as a direct result of the primaries proceeding.

Yale students left on spring break before the Coronavirus was ■ real threat. They were told not to come back and leave everything behind in their dorm rooms. Then Yale closed and went online. This isn't a fair criticism. Yale is trying to raise $5m for New Haven.

The US, which has the most known coronavirus cases in the world, continues to lag in tests per capita.

About 65,000 coronavirus tests are being performed on Americans each day. But public health experts say about 150,000 tests are needed every day.

How anyone votes for these people is utterly incomprehensible to me. He's willing to let you die for his re-election. It's as simple as that. They are just out and out saying it.

> "There's a fatalism that no matter what he does, he's going to get blamed by half of the country," said a former senior administration official with knowledge of Trump's thinking. "If there is something he has some measure of control over, which is the economy, why not potentially try to take action? Yes, there will be a death toll, and he'll get blamed one way or another, but in all likelihood, whether he gets reelected or not will depend on where the economy is and where people's perceptions of the economy are six months from now. COVID-19 Update: Friday, 3/27/20

Here is the latest #COVID19 crisis update from Dr. Smith: columbiasurgery.org/news/covid-19- … (all previous updates linked too)

Dear Colleagues,

The enemy is inside the wire. This became unavoidably obvious yesterday when another colleague was intubated. Just one of an unsettling number of new ventilator cases at CUIMC, but proof for everyone of how real this is getting, regardless of one's personal proximity to the razor wire and the Claymores. A widespread anxiety surge followed, with night-long text chains between the newly rattled. What is the proper response? First, at the most practical level, accept that there is no place to hide. The virus has no opinion on class, race, socioeconomic status, or professional stature. This latest reality-test reminds me that when I first bowed at the altar of healing, I felt I had cut a deal with the devil that I would freely sacrifice in countless ways for others, but in exchange for protection of my family. That lasted only until the first of several times that the devil reneged on our deal.

Perhaps each of us manages this trick by different means, but we find a way to pull out of an anxiety-driven small view and rise up to the big view. For what it's worth, I'll offer a personal example: Picture me in the final stages of drying up the minor bleeding that typically follows straightforward replacement of two heart valves. All is very routine until the back of the heart starts to bleed; it's coming apart. This is a patient I looked in the eye and agreed to care for, to the best of my ability. The preoperative probability of death was ~2%—something like COVID-19—suddenly that has become a very real number, and closer to 50%. I'm not ashamed to confess that my first reaction, 100% of the time, is crippling anxiety and self-doubt. Can I put Humpty together again? But there is no one but me to take care of this. The only response possible is to turn down my thermostat and start trying to do what must be done to save the patient. At least half the time that saves the patient. Back to this reality, we can expect the vast majority of COVID patients to do very well. Even most of those who go on ventilators survive, but not by chance. They survive because we don't give up. We take care of them, even when we're distressed. Even so, no one has any illusions about how difficult that can be.

Craig R. Smith, MD
Chair, Department of Surgery
Surgeon-in-Chief, NYP/CUIMC

Surprised there's not a stack of ventilators in the background. Like with the masks.

Fox News poll finds Trump's net job approval rating improving by 6 points since January.

A 9-point jump among Democrats but no meaningful change among Republicans and independents.

But his head-to-head deficit vs Biden is identical to January: -9 points.

US doing a decent job, so far with a 1.6% death rate. Not great but not bad. Much better than China who's underreported their statistics and still by far the leader, better than Italy, Spain, France and UK. Not as good as Taiwan, South Korea, Germany, Norway, Finland, Denmark.

Diagnostic tests, personal protective equipment, & medical workers are intricately connected. Our comprehensive federal response must recognize how these pieces of the coronavirus puzzle fit together. I've outlined a series of proposals that do just that.

Every time medical professionals treat a patient--and especially when they intubate--they put themselves at great risk. And they do not have the gear they need to mitigate this risk.

It is horrific.

They're trying to change history—don't let them. In the chaotic atmosphere of 2020, the Wayback Machine is a crucial resource in the fight against disinformation, and now more than ever we need your help. Right now we're preserving history as it unfolds, keeping track of who's saying what and when—all without charging for access, selling user data, or running ads. Instead, we rely on the generosity of individuals to help us keep the record straight.

Right now, the Internet Archive (which runs this project) has a 2-to-1 Matching Gift Campaign, tripling the impact of every donation. If you find our public record useful, please chip in.

An expert survey conducted ~2 weeks ago forecasted 200K deaths in the U.S., although with ■ very wide range of possibilities. Revised slightly upward to 246K this week. But Dr. Fauci's estimate of 100K+ deaths is broadly in line with the consensus.

HOWEVER: We are not just inert objects here, and the choices we make could make a huge difference, as the experts think anywhere from around 36K to 1.1m deaths is highly plausible. That's 30-fold difference in possible outcomes.

If you're unsure why these words from Johnson are eyebrow-raising: A conservative PM is rebutting Margaret Thatcher's (in)famous comment that "there is no such thing as society," just individuals.

Fuller Thatcher quote was: "There's no such thing as society. There are individual men and women and there are families. And no government can do anything except through people, and people must look after themselves first."

Wasn't he always a part of British conservatism that was the opposite end of the Tory spectrum as Thatcherism?

Dave Weigel @daveweigel · 21m
He was, it's key to his appeal! Until Brexit he was basically the goofy "not like THOSE Tories" candidate that soft Labour voters could live with.

Why did the US Gov't donate nearly 18 tons of medical equipment to China in February when the White House was warned the pandemic was coming to America? Now our nurses and doctors need these masks, gloves, gowns, and respirators.

What were you thinking??

People are talking about Trump's presser all over my timeline. I can't really watch this, I will confess I can't stomach it. But I want to ask others -- is it really helpful to watch? I mean, this attention is what he craves. He's not really acting like a potus, why tune in?

It is outrageous that Trump thinks holding this down to 100,000 deaths is a good job. Hello?!! South Korea has a tiny fraction of that. We had our first positive case on the same day. His incompetence contributed to these deaths. Period.

The one thing Trump could do to be moderately useful would be to get DeSantis to do a shelter at home order. Florida is now at 4950 cases, and as I read the data, went up a 1000 cases in a day.

The U.S. Defense Department has found 53 more COVID-19 cases in the last 24 hours:

March 25, 2020

Key Developments

- Beginning March 31, 2020, all Military Treatment Facilities and Dental Treatment Facilities will postpone most elective surgeries, invasive procedures, and dental procedures for 60 days. This allows DoD ■ apply its vital healthcare resources for higher priority demands in response to COVID-19.

- The U.S. Army has issued deployment orders to three combat support hospitals to deploy to locations in New York and Washington in order to provide medical support. Designed to serve as trauma hospitals, they function as full-service hospitals, including intensive-care and intermediate-care beds.

- The U.S. Army is increasing the HPCON level for all of its installations to Charlie in order to maintain operational readiness and protect the force. Installations will limit all access to essential personnel only and limit the numbers of access points. Additionally, extra measures are being implemented to protect immediate contingency response forces to prevent exposure to COVID-19 should they need ■ deploy.

- USNORTHCOM has ■ total of 346 passengers from Grand Princess at Travis AFB (82), Lackland AFB (7), MCAS Miramar (129), Dobbins ARB/Clay (128).

DoD Totals, 0500, March 26, 2020

IC's aren't eligible for Unemployment Insurance,because we don't contribute to it. Unless EDD find a person was misclassified. That's a nightmare for any contractor and a triumph for EDD. We need instructions on how to file for PUA

I think it's a misleading information. Even though IC's and gig workers are eligible for financial assistance due to covid-19, the only information I found following the links was about Unemployment Insurance.

We need a national stay at home order. Needed it weeks ago. It remains the most powerful tool we have at this moment to reduce the spread of #covid19. The reluctance to call for such a policy represents a critical failure of federal leadership that will cost lives. (1/x)

Is it necessary for all states to have such an aggressive policy? Yes. Because we are still struggling to test, we have no idea what the real case count is but it's likely many multiples higher than the recorded numbers and the virus is in far more places than we think. (2/x)

The bottom line is this: when it comes to public health response SPEED = LIVES SAVED. We had a slow start in responding to #covid19 and we are trying to catch up. But we need to move faster. Every day matters. (3/x END)

Not true. I really love the fact he is on tv and on livestream 1-2 a day. A president cannot take 5 days off during a crisis, the candidate shouldn't either. The first week of this crisis, they were trying to install Zoom. I wanted him to be more present, he is, and I love it.

A better critique is: the US had a week or two more lead time than Europe and we were pathetically unable to take advantage of it. But strictly in terms of outcomes, it's not clear where we'll end up relative to say, other NATO countries.

NEW: Statement from @JoeBiden blasting Trump's shameful claim that health care workers are stealing masks --->

"Today's conspiracy mongering from our President is among the most reckless and ignorant moves he has made during this crisis, and there have been many."

BIDEN
PRESIDENT

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
March 29, 2020

Statement from Former Vice President Joe Biden on President Trump's False Claim About Personal Protective Equipment

Every single day, our doctors, nurses and other health care providers, EMTs, firefighters, and police officers put their lives on the line for others and fight like hell to protect our health and safety. Unconscionably, they do this without access to the tools they need to protect themselves and continue providing their life-saving efforts — masks, gowns, gloves, and other personal protective equipment. We're already hearing terrible stories of doctors reusing the same respirator mask over and over, storing it in a paper bag between patients. On Friday, the Director-General of the World Health Organization said, "The chronic global shortage of personal protective equipment is now one of the most urgent threats to our collective ability to save lives." Our ability to swiftly end this pandemic relies on our ability to provide this equipment to our front line health care workers.

Not according to Donald Trump.

In the face of his failure to ensure that we are able to produce and distribute this desperately needed equipment, the President stood in front of the American people and suggested that health care workers are lying, instead about the current supply of masks. "Something's going on, and you ought to look into it as reporters. Where are the masks going? Are they going out the back door? That is ridiculous and completely false. Today's conspiracy mongering from our President is among the most reckless and ignorant moves he has made during this crisis, and there have been many. Lives hang in the balance.

I have especially called on President Trump, who has been far too slow to use the Defense Production Act, to use that law's powers to expedite the production of personal protective equipment – including masks. The President has the power and the responsibility to end the shortage of masks. Instead of enabling it to happen, he's blaming and accusing the doctors and nurses and health care workers and hospitals.

Tonight, I am issuing the challenge to Donald Trump. In order to avoid an escalation of the public health crisis we are facing, he must use the Defense Production Act within the next 48 hours to direct the production and distribution of respirator masks, gloves, protective face shields and gowns to fill every supply request made by a governor to the federal government. He should do the same with respect to ventilators. He must think the risk is having too many. That would be a wonderful problem to have. The risk is having too few.

This pandemic fight here-how important it is that we have an experienced leader in the White House who listens to the experts, follows the science, and knows how to manage in a crisis. It also lays bare how important it is that we have a president who tells the truth.

This grim milestone is so jarring, so awful it makes you sick. God rest those precious souls and God help us all. America has never faced a crisis of this magnitude without any presidential leadership. It's all on the governors & state officials, doctors, nurses, scientists & us.

I covered Hungary's first free elections as a reporter back in 1990. It is sad and odd to see this almost exactly 30 years later. The EU I am am sure will express a displeasure but a possible expulsion of Hungary from the Union would be ■ long and tortuous process.

Pence said on March 10th that 1.1 million kits had been distributed with another 4 million by March 15.

Over two weeks later and only a million tests have been carried out. Considering a lot of people will undergo multiple tests, begs the Q how many have actually been tested.

the idea that it's foul play to point out the impacts of policy on real people, other than increasing taxes on rich people which is worse than a thousand hitlers, is ■ weird thing in the political press

I have two degrees in policy but also read enough to know, as you really should, that the ACA's expansion of Medicaid was limited by state refusals & Sebelius and that some people would fall outside the window of eligibility and coverage regardless.

> Armando @ArmandoNDK
> She didn't pose a question- she insinuated Harris didn't want poor people to have health care. This is what's so absurd about this. BTW have you ever heard of Medicaid? Did you know ACA greatly expanded its coverage? Do you know who Medicaid serves? You don't even know policy.

Everything is politics with conservatives. If it's a issue they can exploit for their political advantage they will every time. It's what they did with 9/11 for example. George W won reelection in large part by exploiting people's 9/11 fears.

Based on snippets of right-wing talk radio I've heard, there seems to be a dangerous belief among some that the virus is a threat to "cosmopolitans" and not to the whole country. Just wait till cities and towns less equipped than NYC get hit by this.

> Neera Tanden @neeratanden
> Just a few days ago, New York's positive coronavirus cases were significantly more than half of the US cases; now New York is significantly less than half of US cases as New York positive cases continue to grow. Another way of saying the virus is spreading outside of NY faster.

Rural Minnesota county has unexplained spike in coronavirus cases. Local public health expert thinks it's because of Fox News.

> Pressed for a theory, Langer pointed to early skepticism within a certain cable news outlet.
> "My personal opinion is there are some folks listening to some media outlets that were not taking this seriously. That can be a factor too. It's hard to prove that. I don't want to get political. But there were outlets saying it's a hoax, it's no worse than a cold, and those are things people listen to. Our advice has been to look to credible sources of information like the Minnesota Department of Health and the CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention)."

Worth pointing out that adjacent counties have similar politics, and presumably similar news-watching habits, but they don't have the same spike in cases.

It is heartbreaking the disinformation that's being spread by a News platform...

Trump is not "somber," he's not "acknowledging facts" or "deferring to experts." I doubt he even has a friend in a coma. His goal is strategic: to erase history (his week-ago Easter statement) & nudge the definition of success so he meets it.

I am trying to think of the proper historical analogy for a president making so many decisions that ended up hurting so many Americans. 100,000 deaths is now the optimistic scenario?

Viet Nam is what I came up with. But that was the failure of multiple presidents.

It's simple math. Deaths are doubling about every 3 days. This is reasonably consistent, and so tells us the rate of exponential growth.

So take March 30's figure, 3000 (rounding it down). Multiply 3000 by 2 ten times, to figure the number dead after 30 days.

PENCE TODAY: "I don't believe the president has ever belittled the threat of the coronavirus."

TRUMP on 2/10: "In April, supposedly, [COVID-19] dies with hotter weather."

It's April 1. The U.S. has 188,000 confirmed cases of coronavirus. 3,900 people have died.

The Trump administration waited too long to treat covid-19 as a crisis. So did everyone. If Trump had called for a two-week lockdown in late January rather than the travel ban (which Dems opposed), he would have been called a dictator by the same Dems now calling him derelict.

Maybe morons fall for this but the giant mistake he made was not getting millions of tests out to the Public so the US could contain this by knowing where the virus is.

Biden has done better against Trump than Sanders in hundreds of polls. There's no evidence Biden is struggling but if he is, Sanders is struggling more. I say this respectfully Shaun, but instead of attacking Dems perhaps Sanders surrogates could've been more welcoming of others.

The official story they're touting out is that Hobby Lobby provides people with the supplies and fabric they need to create PPE, and that "makes them essential".

Biden campaign confirms @FoxNews report that @JoeBiden is offering to call President Trump to discuss a strategy to combat the #coronavirus

Full stmt below from @KBeds

"Vice President Biden has been extending his advice for months, and he did so again on the air last night. As he has said repeatedly, Donald Trump is not accountable for coronavirus itself -- but he is accountable for the federal government's slow and chaotic response to this outbreak. Unfortunately, Trump spent months after the virus was discovered disregarding repeated warnings from his scientific and intelligence experts, and downplaying the threat of this outbreak to the American people. He could have heeded Vice President Biden's public advice not to take China's word as they misled the world about their efforts to stop the spread. The Obama-Biden administration even wrote a literal playbook for pandemic response, but unfortunately Trump's administration left it on the shelf. Now we have more coronavirus cases than any other country. Because of this, Donald Trump should act on the bipartisan calls for him to allow open enrollment into the ACA during this public health crisis."

Good news: Italy, Spain, France, all leveling off.

National lockdowns work and stop the Coronavirus.

Combine this with #Masks4All and widespread free testing to track the remaining cases.

The best time to do all this was February, or March.

The next best time is now.

New Marquette poll of Wisconsin primary, trends since February (when there were more candidates running):

Biden: 62% (+47)
Sanders: 34% (+5)

Nearly every non-Sanders voter rushed to Biden in one of Sanders's best 2016 states.

Were Sanders to drop out now, he'd get no more delegates. Staying in gets him hundreds of delegates. But he also runs the risk of running badly behind his 2016 numbers, losing states he'd won before, which is not a fantastic negotiating position.

57 89 411

Dave Weigel @daveweigel · 12h

Context: In the 27 states/territories still left to vote, Sanders trailed Clinton in the 2016 delegate haul, thanks largely to her wins in NY/OH/PA. Sanders won WI in a rout and netted 10 delegates over Clinton. A loss like this would probably net Biden 15-20 delegates out of WI.

President Obama signed a contract to create ventilators in preparation for an eventual pandemic.

The Trump administration let them get sold overseas instead of filling our stockpile.

At over 213,000 positive cases, the US has now almost twice as many as Italy. And our testing is still not pervasive (and has seemed to plateaued a bit) so we may have many, many more.

There will be many more. Further, the health care system is over stressed. This will lead to many more fatalities than there needed to be had Trump simply done his job instead of golfing and holding rallies.

When the final, TRUE numbers are calculated, the US will equal the rest of the world in total cases and deaths.

We are NOT reporting our total deaths right now to keep Dear Leader happy.

The truth will come out.

Even if testing plateaus, I would expect higher prevalence leading to higher case finding. So I'm still cautiously optimistic. But everyone who knows me knows I think we are all under testing. Horribly.

These UI claims are stunningly awful but might not be the same as a normal increase in UI. The normal economic wisdom that job losses are quick but hiring is slow is because search/matching is harder potentially does not apply (if we can keep it temporary by slowing the virus).

Agreed, but that doesn't excuse Congress for not enacting a European-style job retention program that would have prevented much of the current dislocation for businesses and individuals, and the untold worry and misery it is causing right now.

contractors, the self employed, and the gig economy's denizens cannot file and so do not show up in initial claims.

the actual number could be 50-100% higher.

Seth, I know plenty of truth-to-power commanders who got relieved. Institutions say to do the right thing, but what they don't say is that you're gonna pay that freight to the end of your career. That's why I respect those that make the hard calls at the expense of themselves.

🚨Two months before the novel coronavirus is thought to have begun its deadly advance in Wuhan, China, the Trump administration ended a $200-million pandemic early-warning program aimed at training scientists in China and other countries to detect and respond to such a threat.🚨

Janet Johnson @JJohnsonLaw · 21h

The project, launched in '09, identified 1200 viruses with potential to erupt into pandemics, including 160 novel coronaviruses. PREDICT trained & supported

Over 6,000 Americans have died from the coronavirus. 1,000 just today. We have one of the fastest growing death rates in the world.
Remember, this tragedy was avoidable, this loss of life avoidable, if only our country prepared for it just as countries like South Korea did.

At this crucial juncture, forcing out some of our nation's most respected leaders on global health security and scaling back our investment in countering pandemic threats sends a dangerous message to our GHSA partner countries that the U.S. no longer considers global health security a priority. Given the fragmented organization of global health security responsibilities throughout the federal government, having a designated official at the White House coordinating the response is critical to an effective operation. We urge you to reconsider the demotion of the global health security portfolio and reject the proposal to rescind Ebola contingency funds. Saving lives from the next global pandemic starts with investing in preparedness before it strikes. We fear these recent decisions will leave the United States vulnerable to pandemics and commit us to a strategy of triage should one occur.

Captain Crozier was faithful to his duty—both to his sailors and his country. Navy leadership sent a chilling message about speaking truth to power. The poor judgment here belongs to the Trump Admin, not a courageous officer trying to protect his sailors.

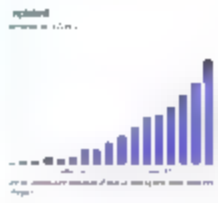
A bit more hopeful on balance than the bleak numbers of the past two days.

28K new cases today vs. 26K yesterday.

But testing increased quite a bit, to 118K today from 101K yesterday.



The COVID Tracking Project @COVID19Tracking
The uptick in completed tests is encouraging, but we'll need a few more days of growth before we can declare the plateau in U.S. testing to be over.

If you review Crozier's record you see he was a retention officer, which likely increased his sensitivity to the sailor's service experience. Probably learned that if you don't protect and care for your people they leave the Navy and good talent evaporates.

You know, there was a way to avoid the primaries last week. Sanders could have dropped out. Biden is the plurality leader. Instead of doing that, Sanders campaigned -- and asked people to go to the polls for him. But I'm glad you're fixated on my question to the campaign.

I also heard that older people in assisted living facilities who die from Coronavirus are not being reported since the facilities don't want to face the consequences of the outbreak.

Does someone have an explanation as to why the Italian, Spanish, French and British death rate from the coronavirus is so much higher than American rate? We have so many more positive cases than these other countries; ■ it because we are earlier in the cycle? Other explanations?

Germany's low death rate also stands out. I've read that they were were able to intervene earlier when they first got cases. But the rate remains low

The German Health is based more locally in their "states" or "counties". They were able to test way more people at the beginning, isolate, and contact trace. They moved faster into "stay home" rules
And they listened to science and data to make decisions and not partisan politics

You know, there was a way to avoid the primaries last week. Sanders could have dropped out. Biden is the plurality leader. Instead of doing that, Sanders campaigned -- and asked people to go to the polls for him. But I'm glad you're fixated on my question to the campaign.

This morning @AliVelshi reported on the insanity of 50 states & FEMA bidding against each other & driving up the price of critical equipment. We've lost the bargaining power of a federal gov't. Hard to understand why any POTUS would do this but my instinct is, follow the money.

I am normally on board for "Trump is a symptom not the cause" but the nexus of beliefs around travel restrictions as panacea, total unawareness of FDA issues, and galaxy brain --maybe an uncontrolled epidemic spreading in China is actually good-- is pretty idiosyncratic to him.

Trump is a symptom (product) of hyper- partisanship, polarization, and a very civicly sick American public- in-so-far as a healthy Amer political system could not nominate him-let alone elect him.

Doesn't change or detract from his monster status.

He did this in 2016 to attack Hillary by boosting Trump and now he does it again in 2020. Despite all the evidence of the last 3 years and the Trump's massive bungling of the coronavirus response, here Glenn is trying to make Trump a lefty hero. This will not age well.

Yes, we should clearly have universal care, but there is not a definitive correlation between a given country's specific universal system & how it's equipped to handle this crisis. Germany, for example, is multipayer and is fairing much better than the UK nyti.ms/2JEVPH6

A Robust Public Health Care System

Before the coronavirus pandemic swept across Germany, University Hospital in Giessen had 173 intensive care beds equipped with ventilators. In recent weeks, the hospital scrambled to create an additional 40 beds and increased the staff that was on standby to work in intensive care by as much as 50 percent.

"We have so much capacity now we are accepting patients from Italy, Spain and France," said Susanne Herold, a specialist in lung infections at the hospital who has overseen the restructuring. "We are very strong in the intensive care area."

All across Germany, hospitals have expanded their intensive care capacities. And they started from a high level. In January, Germany had some 28,000 intensive care beds equipped with ventilators, or 34 per 100,000 people. By comparison, that rate is 12 in Italy and 7 in the Netherlands.

Honestly, I don't know what it says that a journalist like @glenngreenwald can't decipher that my tweets literally say what I said they do -- that the type of health care payment system and a country's virus response is not correlated. But for him disingenuousness is an art form

It's not like any of this is true -- I've simply pointed out a country's virus response is not contingent on the form of health care payment in the country. I developed a plan for universal coverage - Medicare Extra.
But Greenwald is trying to paint Trump to the left of the Dems

> Glenn Greenwald @ggreenwald

You know, there was a way to avoid the primaries last week. Sanders could have dropped out. Biden is the plurality leader. Instead of doing that, Sanders campaigned -- and asked people to go to the polls for him. But I'm glad you're fixated on my question to the campaign.

The word "moron" has a specific history used to stigmatize, institutionalized, sterilize, and sometimes euthanize people with developmental and intellectual disabilities... Like my son. Would you consider not using it? Talk to your disability justice folks about it.

And how much does it cost for someone to get tested? Pretty sure it's unaffordable for most of us. That is the reason why we can't do early testing for everyone. Well, that and the the fact that the test weren't widely available in the early days.

You know, there was a way to avoid the primaries last week. Sanders could have dropped out. Biden is the plurality leader. Instead of doing that, Sanders campaigned -- and asked people to go to the polls for him. But I'm glad you're fixated on my question to the campaign.

Biden is a terrible candidate, and a terrible person, so of course Trump wants Dems to push harder for Biden. The worse the person is, the better the chance Trump has of winning. Biden will have trouble winning on policy because of his own terrible record.

I wish we could save Biden the trouble. He quit his first run in '88 when it was revealed he plagiarized a speech and lied about his college grades. Those facts remain unchanged, but our minimal standards for decency and integrity have suffered a rapid decline since then.

You know, there was a way to avoid the primaries last week. Sanders could have dropped out. Biden is the plurality leader. Instead of doing that, Sanders campaigned -- and asked people to go to the polls for him. But I'm glad you're fixated on my question to the campaign.

Sanders has good ideas on the topics in which the choice between Democrats matters most, he has a plausible electability case, he's been a pragmatic and reasonably effective legislator, and his nomination is, by far, the best way to put toxic infighting to rest and bring the rising cohort of left-wing young people into the tent — for both the 2020 campaign and the long-term future.

For the record, the plan I support is more akin to the German system -- which is universal. Germany has handled this virus better than many, but I don't think that is because of the way they structure health payment.

The death "rate" is roughly constant, if you multiply by a constant value rather than add one.

That means the death rate is exponential.

(Another way of saying that is that the death rate is constant if measured in decibels. People understand decibels, even if vaguely.)

It's not like any of this is true -- I've simply pointed out a country's virus response is not contingent on the form of health care payment in the country. I developed a plan for universal coverage - Medicare Extra.

HHS @SecAzar just made this point at the White House coronavirus briefing.

Secretary Azar didn't use the words Obamacare or ACA while telling Americans they can sign up on "the health care exchanges" if they lost their employer plan. The administration is currently working to wipe out Obamacare in the courts.

Bill Gates is setting up factories to manufacture 7 leading vaccine candidates before we know which is best & safest; we can test the vaccines in parallel, and then throw away all but the factory for the best vaccine. May save many months.

Just extraordinary.

"Because our foundation has such deep expertise in infectious diseases, we've thought about the epidemic, we did fund some things to be more prepared, like a vaccine effort," Gates said. "Our early money can accelerate things."

Gates said he was picking the top seven vaccine candidates and building manufacturing capacity for them. "Even though we'll end up picking at most two of them, we're going to fund factories for all seven, just so that we don't waste time in serially saying, 'OK, which vaccine works?' and then building the factory," he said.

Gates said that simultaneously testing and building manufacturing capacity is essential to the quick development of a vaccine, which Gates thinks could take about 18 months.

In a Washington Post op-ed article published earlier this week, Gates said some of the top candidates required unique equipment.

"It will be a few billion dollars we'll waste on manufacturing for the constructs that don't get picked because something else is better," Gates said in the clip. "But a few billion in this, the situation we're in, where there's trillions of dollars ... being lost economically, it is worth it."

We have over 310,000 positive cases, 8500 deaths. The death rate is accelerating. All because the Trump Admin ignored the threat for too long and when they weren't ignoring, they were bungling the response.

This is a function of where the virus is when the stay at home order is issued -- if it's already widespread, then stay at home orders have far less impact. See New York v. CA. Texas cities may have stayed in time, the problem is they have a real threat from rural counties

THREAD: If we'd taken certain steps in winter - and recognized #coronavirus had characteristics we always feared in its balance between transmissibility and lethality - we may be in different position now. Let's not have to say in the fall we wish we'd done more in the spring.

We'll win this round, at an almost unbearable cost in treasure and in souls. But #COVID19 won't recede permanently. It'll most probably become epidemic in the southern hemisphere and return to us in September. This is a pathogen that wants to infect 40% of the world's population.

We need a massive surveillance system to detect spread early so we can rely and case-based strategies to isolate sick people and close contacts. But we also need a drug. And there are only ■ handful far enough along in development that can be good enough to make a real difference

Scott Gottlieb, MD @ScottGottliebMD · 18m

The antiviral Remdesivir from Gilead is one. Used early in disease it may have robust enough treatment effect to impact outcomes. Other strategies are monoclonal antibodies that target virus directly. They can be used as treatment or prophylaxis - a bridge until we get vaccine.

I think it's really just a lot for a nation to bear to have over 330,000 positive cases, 9,500 death, an increasing death rate AND a complete and total train wreck president. Honestly, it's just ridiculous that we have to deal with Trump on top of all of this.

It's THE TRUTH. How is there any difference between churches encouraging people to gather and the Democratic Party officials (including Joe Biden) encouraging in-person voting? And don't say he didn't because he was quoted saying that nothing is as good as going to the polls.

You see the GOP who is actively trying to keep people voting on Tuesday and Biden as the same and you wonder why you alienate Democrats. It's because you hate Dems more than the GOP -- and you know what, we all noticed and voted accordingly. Great work.

I would like to hear from an actual epidemiologist about whether per capita or raw infections (or something else?) is the preferred measure of how well/poorly a country/state/etc is handling the virus.

I say this with great respect, but when Bernie's own campaign manager is telling him to get out of the race, how do you think he can win? His own campaign won't answer basic questions on how he can win -- can you? otherwise, you're just weakening Trump's opponent.

The word "moron" has a specific history used to stigmatize, institutionalized, sterilize, and sometimes euthanize people with developmental and intellectual disabilities... Like my son. Would you consider not using it? Talk to your disability justice folks about it.

#COVID_19 in America could rightly be called the 'Trump Virus'. US IC alerted POTUS late 2019 of the danger.
The pathetic & purposefully late effort in keeping the curve low, preparing society and especially health care sector.
Thousands unnecessarily die.

This is Trump Virus!

Or the takeaway was that Bernie, despite having the money and organizational advantage, was a weak candidate, and 65-70% of Democratic voters preferred literally anyone else. Once it became clear that only him or Joe Biden had a path to win, they overwhelmingly went to Joe Biden.

> David Klion @DavidKlion
> The big takeaway of the primaries is that the Dem establishment is way more powerful and unified than anyone gave it credit for. Dem leaders don't want to say that out loud because it would implicitly admit that Biden won big in spite of running a terrible campaign by any metric.

According to the Johns Hopkins coronavirus tracker, 11,000 people have now died from the virus in the United States. And many experts believe we are undercounting the numbers of people who have died from the virus.

FDR did not create a strong middle class with the New Deal. The New Deal was implemented because of wide spread worker strikes. Beginning May 1st, let us ALL STRIKE, and not go to work. And continue striking every Friday, until our demands (Bernies agenda) are met!

"Dignity of Work isn't a slogan — it's who we are, and how we govern; Joe Biden understands that."

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
April 7, 2020

Ohio Senator Sherrod Brown Endorses Joe Biden

Today, Ohio Senator Sherrod Brown released the following statement endorsing Joe Biden for President of the United States:

"Joe Biden has dedicated his life to serving our country, and has never forgotten whom he fights for: the millions of Americans who are working hard, but feel like they can't earn their way to a better life, no matter how hard they work. Dignity of Work isn't a slogan — it's who we are, and how we govern; Joe Biden understands that. And as we face both a public health crisis and an economy in turmoil, we need a steady hand more than ever. Joe Biden has the experience, the tenacity, and the empathy to lead in a crisis, and the hope to bring us together, and steer us toward brighter days ahead."

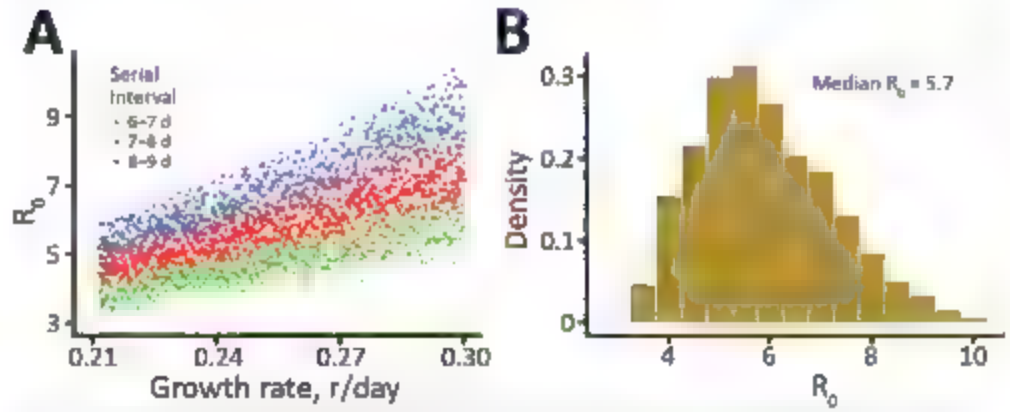

Figure 5. Estimation of the basic reproductive number (R_0), derived by integrating uncertainties in parameter values, during the 2019 novel coronavirus disease outbreak in China. A) Changes in R_0 based on different growth rates and serial intervals. Each dot represents a calculation with mean latent period (range 2.2–6 days) and mean infectious periods (range 4–14 days). Only those estimates falling within the range of serial intervals of interests were plotted. B) Histogram summarizing the estimated R_0 of all dots in panel A (i.e., serial interval ranges of 6–9 days). The median R_0 is 5.7 (95% CI 3.8–8.9).

Q poll has Trump at his highest ever approval (45%) and yet...

In a head to head matchup, Biden beats Trump 49 – 41 percent.

When asked who would do a better job handling a crisis, voters say 51 – 42 percent that Biden would do a better job than Trump.

Crap. The Oversight Committee says the strategic national stockpile is depleted, it was doled out with little strategic concern, and states are depending largely on private markets now. Maloney statement:

Officials Confirm PPE Stockpile for States is Now Depleted, States Must Rely on Private Sector

Washington, D.C. (Apr. 8, 2020) Today, Rep. Carolyn B. Maloney, the Chairwoman of the Committee on Oversight and Reform, released a new document from the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) detailing the Administration's insufficient distribution of personal protective equipment and critical medical supplies to states from the Strategic National Stockpile. Chairwoman Maloney issued the following statement:

"The document the Oversight Committee is releasing today shows that the federal government has distributed just a fraction of the personal protective equipment and critical medical supplies that our hospitals and medical first responders urgently need.

"Now that the national stockpile has been depleted of critical equipment, it appears that the Administration is leaving states to fend for themselves, to scour the open market for these scarce supplies, and to compete with each other and federal agencies in a chaotic, free-for-all bidding war.

"The President failed to bring in FEMA early on, failed to name a national commander for this crisis, and failed to fully utilize the authorities Congress gave him under the Defense Production Act to procure and manage the distribution of critical supplies. He must take action now to address these deficiencies."

The new document shows personal protective equipment, ventilators, and other critical medical supplies dispersed as of Monday from the Strategic National Stockpile to the 50 states, the District of Columbia, territories, metropolitan areas, and one tribal government. The document shows:

- Only 11.7 million N95 respirator masks have been distributed nationwide – less than 1% of the 3.5 billion masks that the Trump Administration estimated would be necessary in the event of a severe pandemic.
- Only 7,920 ventilators have been distributed from the stockpile, even though a recent survey of 213 mayors—which did not include New York City, Chicago, or Seattle—identified a total estimated need of 139,000 ventilators.

With every passing day, President Biden's responsibilities become more overwhelming.

How did Truman put it?

"Boys, if you ever pray, pray for me now....when they told me yesterday what had happened, I felt like the moon, the stars, and all the planets had fallen on me."

Of course @JoeBiden has work to do to consolidate his party, especially with the left.

But he's currently leading Trump among women by 30 points, per new CNN poll.

Personally, with the spread of the virus, I think this number is low.The most critical aspect of testing is to test seemingly healthy areas as well as the sick to find where the virus.We aren't doing that. JP Morgan estimated we need to be 500,000 tests a day and that seems right

We are at well over 1MM cases now. The estimates for how many we miss because of our feeble testing regime are all higher than 2/1. Some much higher. We have yet to test 1% of the population. To test 1% a week (reasonable goal) we'd have to have testing volume 20X current levels.

Things have flattened out quite a bit. It's hard to tell whether they've flattened but still sloping up, flattened but now sloping down, or what, and it depends on how you account for testing volume, which does continue to increase some but with fluctuations from day to day.

Fairly basic advice from former NBC News Executive rollingstone.com/politics/polit …

> But I think we have to step back and remember what our mission is, what all of us got into this business to do. We got into this business to ferret out facts, to hold people to account, to speak truth to power, and ultimately to make a difference with the stories and serve the public. Put that filter back on what you're doing live. And if where you pointed your camera isn't doing that for your audience, then maybe that camera shouldn't be on live television.

> Conservative pundits, like John Cardillo of Newsmax.com and Bill Mitchell, the host of the online talk show "YourVoice America," have already seized on the gap between the grimmest models and the upward-trending facts to criticize social-distancing measures and to argue that the national economy should be reopened quickly.

We lost an additional 783 New Yorkers yesterday.

These are staggering numbers.

Behind this number are individuals and families, and untold loss and pain.

We mourn all those who we lost to this vicious virus.

I know we all want things to go back to normal.

But the worst thing that can happen is that we make a misstep and we let our emotions get ahead of logic and facts, and we go through this all over again.

Battles over the details matter, but the 6 states both sides consider most likely to pick the winner-MI/PA/WI, FL/NC,AZ-all allow "no excuse" absentee voting. That means they are likely to see a vast increase in mail balloting in November-whatever Trump does or says.

No justification that I can see, unless we want to put up similar geographic cordons in the US - there is plenty of disease already in the US to cause spread domestically.

I was hoping he would mention about schools, government and private sector tele-work, community gatherings, things that really need everyone to actively engage in. And also extra resources for healthcare providers. We really need to protect providers who care for covid-19 patients. We must protect them because they are invaluable resources and we don't have enough
From: James V. Lawler

We are making every misstep leaders initially made in table-tops at the outset of pandemic planning in 2006. We had systematically addressed all of these and had a plan that would work – and has worked in Hong Kong/Singapore. We have thrown 15 years of institutional learning out the window and are making decisions based on intuition. Pilots can tell you what happens when a crew makes decisions based on intuition rather than what their instruments are telling them. And we continue to push the stick forward. .

I interviewed several of these doctors, who have spent their lives preparing for potential disease outbreaks like what is happening now. They are devastated over what is happening, like CDC questioning in mid March value of closing schools

CDC is really missing the mark here. By the time you have "substantial community transmission' it is too late. It's like ignoring the smoke detector and waiting until your entire house is on fire ■ call the fire dept. Plus, how are you supposed to know when you have community transmission when they haven't been able to provide a diagnostic assay that can be used widely and at high volume?

Campaign Statement on Donald Trump's Historic F ew York Times released a report detailing the Trump Administratic

t Deputy Campaign Manager and Communications Directo
eld released the following statement:

lunching report is the starkest illustration yet of a tragic fact that beca

"Instead of heeding specific and detailed warnings as early as January from his National Security Council, his trade advisor, his HHS Secretary, and from public health experts, Donald Trump did practically nothing to meaningfully prepare the country for the dual public health and economic crises that were engulfing our work. Trump focused instead on obsessing over his public image, short-term trends in the stock market, and his desire to close a trade deal with Xi Jinping that his advisors suggested would help his re-election prospects this November — even as China misled the world about the extent of the virus' spread.

"Now, Trump is misleading the American people about what he knew, and when, telling reporters just days ago that he was never briefed on the contents of White House aide Peter Navarro's memo outlining the looming threat — something clearly refuted by the reporting. And the president is now considering telling everyone to end social distancing without any kind of credible plan to keep them safe, and appears more focused on TV ratings than the work that needs to be done to save American lives.

"Instead of strong leadership in a moment of national crisis, Trump gave us chaos, excuses, and politically motivated attacks. Instead of swift measures to stop the disease, Trump wasted precious weeks downplaying its threat and praising China.

"This is a moment of crisis for our country unlike anything we've experienced in recent memory. We need a president who is capable of meeting this moment."

Antibody tests are coming online. Never before have humans needed to understand Bayes rule more. Let's talk about why it's critical NOT to assume you are immune to covid-19 when you have a positive antibody test. Seriously, people need to understand this to prevent many deaths.

In both the Washington State and New York, we are getting long plateaus. I'm not an expert on modeling but it seems the IMHE model is not really capturing the truth here. It may be that our less stringent social distancing than China is creating longer plateaus.

Experience from Washington State and now New York seems to indicate that there's a longish plateau at the top of the curves. IMHE didn't seem to indicate that - shows sharper declines. This means social distancing needs to be strongly adhered to.

I also believe that the lower Texas and Florida numbers in both positive tests and deaths are based on lower testing than in NY and CA for political reasons. Trump and GOP know that tens of thousands of cases there would be political nightmare.

A couple of things to be mindful of:

1) Federal government response is only one factor in how well a country responds, especially in a federalist system like the US;

2) There is likely a fair amount of "luck", based on when initial outbreaks were seeded in Jan./Feb.

A decent take is:

The US could have done quite well with this because we have a lot of natural advantages—empowered and largely competent states/localities, good hospitals, innovative private sector, etc —but because of Trump, we squandered those & wound up in middle of the pack.

Many in media/political sphere have lauded Gov. Newsome & criticized Gov. Abbott. Here are numbers as of today based on per million population (and both states have done pretty much same number of tests per M population):
Cases per M: CA 546: TX 437
Deaths per M: CA 15; TX 9.

This worse-than-useless #COVID19 graph is making the rounds.

The problem with it is in the early stages, epidemics spread at the same rate irrespective of country size.

When you divide by population, you create a misleading illusion of lower R0 in bigger countries.

By an overwhelming 3-1, 69%-21%, Americans endorse a nationwide lockdown through the end of April, requiring people to stay at home except for essential work. The idea is backed by solid majorities across partisan lines, by 8 in 10 Democrats and 62% of Republicans.

I'm sure this will change, but not great news for Trump:

A new UtahPolicy.com/KUTV poll in Utah finds President Trump leading Joe Biden by just five points, 46% to 41%, with 5% saying they'll vote for a third party.

This underscores how important the details of vote by mail plans are. Ohio, for example, is mailing voters postcards telling them how to request an absentee ballot. Georgia is mailing active registered voters a request form. In NY, you still have to print out, mail in request

A big fear i have is that people will engage in anchoring bias and won't look at decisions they made at beginning and question them based on later evidence or data. And will anchor in their original thought and only look for evidence that confirms their initial position.

> Matthew Dowd @matthewjdowd
> I hope as we move towards a methodical lessening of mitigation folks will look at data by jurisdiction & see what mitigation efforts were most effective. There are some states and areas that didn't issue immediate or strict stay at home orders which have low fatality rates.

The whole point of mitigation as argued by health officials was to lower the initial peak, not to eliminate the virus, so health resources wouldn't be overrun. Everyone knows this virus is with us for at least a year or more.

How about we look at data and see what levels of mitigation are actually effective and needed? One size fits all isn't following the data. Look at some states and areas which didn't apply strict stay at home orders immediately. Many have low fatality and hospitalization rates.

I think the essential issue is you think data is telling you something it is not actually telling you because we don't have the universe of cases. It may be telling you Texas will not have an outbreak. It may yet still have one. We don't know yet. I hope you're right.

I am not certain about it. I am saying that those advocating for strict stay at home orders for every acre of the country are not presenting an iota of evidence that that breadth of closing down was or is necessary.

again the whole point of mitigation efforts was to lower the peak, not to get rid of the virus. Everyone knows we are going to have a second or third wave. The question is what is best strategy to open the country up, and what type of mitigation efforts are needed based on data

Yes, but eventually we need to get _back_ to containment or we'll be stuck in lockdowns until we have a vaccine. We can't stay in mitigation forever, it's not possible.

But at this point, the Dem overperformance is broad enough that it would definitely have to take some kind of weird reporting bias like this, where ▬ the late results break one way, for Kelly to hold on. Obviously, reluctant to rule that out in these circumstances.

Some warning signs for Kelly, the GOP-backed candidate...

- down in Winnebago County by 4000 votes with 20% of precincts out. GOP-backed candidate won county by 1000 votes in 2019.

One short-term impact of the liberal's court win in Wisconsin will be on the fight over a purge of 200k voters. Court had been split 3-3 with a conservative joining the 2 liberals and Kelly abstaining due to this election. So there's now a 4-3 majority against the purge.

Based on what's out it's going to be between 8 and 9 points for Karofsky.

Seems a pretty big win for a Wisconsin race. Evers won by a bit over 1 point.

An 8 point spread in a statewide Wisconsin race is quite a gap.
This is a huge sign for November.

I am 100% "Vote Blue No Matter Who" in the GENERAL ELECTION.

But first we have to have a primary where every candidate is vetted and no candidate is treated like a savior.

The surest way to guarantee 4 more years of Trump is to have a nominee who is not BATTLE-TESTED and READY.

The consequences of the GOP (or Democrats for that matter) making it harder to vote during a pandemic are at the very least unpredictable. People are likely to be hyper-sensitive to these measures in a way they might not be ordinarily.

We have now had 30,000 deaths from the coronavirus in our country. That is 10 9/11s. Just such a profound tragedy. It makes me want to scream that the idiot we have as a president is talking about reopening our economy with no plan, which would just mean more sickness and death.

I wish that at the WH "briefings" there would be no questions about anything other than how we get PPE to front line workers and how we're building a massive test and trace capability until we get answers on those. Because one is a moral duty and the other is the only way out.

glad to see this, @GOP cannot be seen as a serious national party if it cannot support reducing barriers to free and open elections. You can not credibly argue for less regulations in industry while working OT to disenfranchise voters because of turnout fear.

There is path out of #COVID19 that doesn't end in maximum carnage (deaths, economy). It's strong social distancing now, massive scaleup of testing, contact tracing, isolation, PPE, hospital capacity. Yet, we're back to "when can we open" as if there is a short-cut that will work.

WASHINGTON — There once was a time when President Trump made clear that governors were the ones mainly responsible for the fight against the coronavirus pandemic. But that was Sunday. On Monday, he declared that he was really in charge and would make the decision about when and how to reopen the country.

In the end, the WI Supreme Court race wasn't very close. Ballots from Dane County (Madison) boosted Karofsky to an 11-point lead; she won by more than 160,000 votes overall.

Basically a 10 point race. One of the largest statewide margins in Wisconsin in a while and for a liberal Supreme Court Justice.

The whole point of making employers liable for risking the lives of their staff is to prevent them from exposing their staff to undue risk.

Businesses are asking for the right to expose their workers to fatal risks with no consequences. It's bad economics and bad policy.

> According to the participants, who were granted anonymity to describe private communications, there appeared to be ■ wide consensus that more virus testing was needed to track who was infected and who might have immunity before employees could return to work. But another issue of great concern, one of the participants said, was the need to address the liability companies could face if employees were to get sick after returning.

Crucial correction: Trump did not actually "implement" anything, on 3/16 or any other time. CDC issued some (too mild, too late) guidance (some before 3/16), but it was governors and mayors who actually have implemented all of the restrictions, some earlier, some later or never.

Maybe everyone's noticed this already, but the IMHE model seems off; just looking at DC, we have 81 deaths and it is projecting only 117 deaths overall through August. Given case rates are not going down in DC yet, that seems pretty optimistic.

IHME has a very narrow window to be right and they're much more likely to be wrong at this point. You can't keep adding 20k-30k new cases per day and not have a substantial death toll. We have to cut down the number of cases through testing, isolation, contact tracing, treatment.

"...Aggressive community screening and concomitant isolation of those found infected offer our best and perhaps only hope of ending this outbreak without destroying the economy, the health care system, the public's confidence and/or many thousand lives." Me and Ed Kaplan. twitter.com/gregggonsalves …

End the coronavirus outbreak with aggressive screening to find and isolate infected people

We have just a few weeks to plan for our best and possibly only way to stop this pandemic before it destroys our economy and health care system.

Trump still refuses to allow the federal government to facilitate widespread testing. Why is that? Couldn't we be well ahead of where we are if he would just enact the DPA full force for testing, PPE, and other necessary medical equipment. Why has he left this to the states?

When the history of this chapter is written, we'll understand that there was no more shameful and ultimately costly decision than when Trump opted to prioritize his empty trade deal over the health of the American people.

When it mattered most, Trump put Xi first.

It's a decision Trump made in January and doubled down on in February — when we needed leadership most. And the consequences can be measured in the thousands of lives needlessly lost since.

27 million is just the tip of the iceberg.

We need 500 million X 10 STAT to be able to consistently retest people, especially those on the front lines.

AND they need to be validated and reliable.

WHO guidance on coronavirus was super-flawed but they did say as early as January 24 that countries should get ready to do "active surveillance, early detection, isolation and case tracking"' and then Trump didn't do any of that.

To other countries

It is expected that further international exportation of cases may appear in any country. Thus, all countries should be prepared for containment, including active surveillance, early detection, isolation and case management, contact tracing and prevention of onward spread of 2019-nCoV infection, and to share full data with WHO.

Herd immunity is not a theory, you must conflate the concept with a policy you dislike. Humans live and survive in an environment where pathogens abound due to herd immunity acquired as a by-product of infections or directly from vaccinations.

And yet a highly predictable argument. It's a weird place to be too. You obviously can't root for the virus, but you know that if we actually get a handle on it and "only" 10s of thousands of Americans die, people are going to be using as a bludgeon against expertise.

Very predictable. Same argument for health, job safety, and environmental rules. Rules prevent something bad from happening. Therefore we don't need them.

Republicans will turn a blind eye & too many in the press will focus on "tone." But history books will say: In April of 2020, when the pandemic had already claimed 35,000 lives, the President of the United States incited people to storm their statehouses with AR-15s and AK-47s.

What do I see as the major problems?

1. Poorly chosen, non-representative samples

2. Weakness at thinking through important Bayesian principles

3. Inconsistency with other, more verifiable results

4. Attachment to ■ particular idea (slow willingness to update on evidence)

2 1 29

Alan Cole ✓ @AlanMCole · 36m

Point 1. The gold standard for selecting things ■ to take entirely random people whom you know nothing about--and especially, your sampling technique can't have any obvious relationship with the variable you're testing for.

This is, unfortunately, hard.

Numbers are also fabricated in the sense any death of a patient w/ the virus, whether from Covid-19 complications or not, is tallied as a Covid-19 death &added to the total. Not here to argue or justify the other side, just noting there's no true way to tell the legitimate number

Facebook truly never misses an opportunity to shine as a valuable societal enterprise during the most impactful moments over the last decade. Unbroken record of success.

Many groups members took Trump's tweet as a sign that he backed their effort to oppose Gov. Gretchen Whitmer's (D) stay-at-home order; others saw it a signal to rise up against Democrats.

Warren being chosen as VP would be a good example of something that normal Sanders supporters would like, and the fact that a few Very Online ones might not like it is a sign that they aren't really speaking for the majority.

Relatedly, the Very Online folks don't have much leverage over Biden because it's not clear what would make them happy, and the things that might actually make them happy (but probably not) are things that Biden would likely never consider.

Nate Silver @NateSilver538 · 10h

In this story, there's lots of reporting on Sanders-friendly groups and people who do want Warren to be chosen, but the story is framed the opposite way, perhaps because reporters overstate the influence of the Very Online crowd (+drama makes headlines).

A striking figure from @meye slab new modeling report. They plot IHME's projections for daily deaths in Italy and Spain in blue, with the real counts in black. Note the overconfidence of the projections, with a slower decline in deaths than predicted.

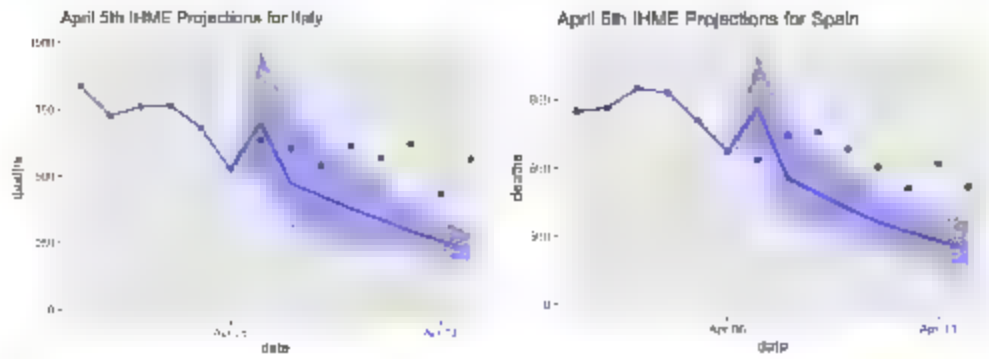

Figure 1: The IHME model's April 5 projections ten days ahead for Italy and Spain (blue lines). The actual data (black dots) fall noticeably outside the model's 95% error bars (shaded blue region), illustrating the model's underestimate of forecasting uncertainty, even in countries whose peak daily death rates seem to be well characterized by the data.

These figures were created using IHME's method. Importantly, the projections are unreliable even in populations where the peak in daily deaths has been clearly observed (Spain, Italy). Now think about trying to make projections in a place where the curve is still only rising.

The Dem alliance with China. The glee over the pandemic and the economic carnage is far too obvious.

Residents of San Francisco formed an "Anti-Mask League" to fight an ordinance requiring masks to fight the Spanish flu. The city fared the worst in the U.S. influenzaarchive.org/cities/city-sa …

> Once again, San Franciscans put on their flu masks, and once again complaints were lodged. One man wrote Hassler that masks served no purpose, adding that if the health officer wished to wear a mask he could freely do so, "and as far as I am concerned, I hope he will have to wear one for the next five years." He opined that the mask ordinance stood on shaky legal ground, and that it would likely be dissolved if the issue were brought before the courts.[29] Sentiment was so strong against the mask that several influential San Franciscans, including a few physicians as well as a member of the Board of Supervisors, formed "The Anti-Mask League" which held at least one public meeting to denounce the ordinance and to discuss ways to put an end to it. Over 2,000 people attended the event.[30]

Anyone who has stayed late at the office knows the very low standard that is being enhanced. Same duster on everyone's desk, no Lysol/Clorox, no wiping down chairs.

5. Other governors, like @GregAbbott_TX @RonDeSantisFL are playing with #coronavirus fire, risking the lives of their residents by re-opening as "career moves," to appeal to their great leader in DC. Their actions are irresponsible and wrong.

6. We all know the toll that social distancing is taking on our country. But it does NOT have to be this way: other countries have scaled-up economic and social support to a far greater extent than we have but we don't do it, because, well, we're Americans and we have bootstraps.

If CAP wasn't intimidated by it's employees they wouldn't have busted their union.

You can't expect KevinBro to know what they're talking about.

Didn't CAP lay off it's unionized staff members at ThinkProgress, because they were worried it was going to lose the editorial independence that was guaranteed in their contracts?

And this is the asymmetry of the treatment of the parties -- because if a Democratic president acted this way, the media coverage would be of the wedge between independents and their base; with GOP, it's always about the power of their base. Really alters the terrain of politics

> Neera Tanden @neeratanden
> When we get a 1000 people at the Capitol to protest the GOP, the @nytimes rarely covers it. But we are liberals pushing against GOP efforts to hurt people. Not right wing extremists undermining public safety. So I guess it makes sense. twitter.com/jkuhnhenn/stat…

Just imagine how the media might treat a progressive.

What is the Times doing with their coverage? It's become the Politico version of the Times but to what end? I've been reading the Times for 60 years, the paper I knew and trusted is GONE, things always change but this is destructive change and it's killing journalism.

The United States has conducted more than 4 MILLION coronavirus tests thanks to the leadership of President @realDonaldTrump.

This is DOUBLE the numbers of any other country!

Wow, just 23 MILLION short of what the White House promised they'd have for us three weeks ago! HOORAY!

7. We are at a critical moment. The press has to saddle up. There has been some great reporting on what is happening, but too many political reporters still are obsessed with covering the circus, the smoke and mirrors.

9. Do we want this to end? The way the nation is proceeding, with the consent of too many of the governed, is setting the stage for worse economic carnage and more deaths by #coronavirus.
